PREFACE.

FOR publishing the compressed edition of the English Baronetage, which is brought down to the period of the last creation (April 1, 1806) no apology is requisite. Much pains has been taken by the Editor to render it correct; and, while the portability of its form must recommend it to public notice, its being the only complete work of the kind gives it a claim to universal patronage.

To the English Baronets, Baronets of Great Britain, and of the United Kingdom, are subjoined accounts of some Scottish Baronets of English families; or resident in England; with correct lists of all the Scottish and Irish Baronets.

INTRODUCTION.

THE order of Baronets, which is the first among the gentry, and the only knighthood that is hereditary, was instituted by King James the First in the year 1611, who limited the number to two hundred; but since that period they have been greatly increased. One thousand three hundred and eighty-two Baronets of England, Great Britain, and of the United Kingdom, have been created; and exclusively of those who have attained the rank of nobility, there are now existing upwards of five hundred. The title Sir is granted to them, by a clause in their patents; their wives are Ladies; and they have precedence before all Knights, except Knights of the Garter, Knights who are Privy Councillors, or Knights Bannerets, made under the King's banner or standard.

It is understood, that the rebellion of the Irish, in the province of Ulster, gave rise to this order; as a Baronet, on his creation, must pay into the Exchequer as much as will maintain thirty soldiers for three years, at eight-pence per day, in the province of Ulster, in Ireland, which amounts to nearly 1100*l.* sterling *.

A Baronet of England, Great Britain, or of the United Kingdom, has the privilege to bear, in a canton of his coat of arms, or in a whole escutcheon, the arms of Ulster, viz: In a field, argent, a sinister hand, gules. To be qualified, the person ought to be a gentleman born, and have a clear estate of 1000*l. per annum.*

The order of Baronets in Scotland was projected by King James the Sixth, to encourage the colonization of the province of Nova Scotia, in America, the first settlement made by the Scots beyond the Atlantic; but he dying before his intentions were accomplished, his son, King Charles the First, in the first year of his reign, executed his royal father's plan, and instituted this order immediately after his accession. In the patents granted previously to the year 1629, his Majesty declared and ordained, that the Baronets, and their heirs male, should, as an addition of honour to their armorial ensigns, bear, either on a canton, or inescutcheon, at their option, the ensign of Nova Scotia, being Argent, a cross of St. Andrew, azure, charged with an inescutcheon of the royal arms of Scotland; supported on the dexter by the royal unicorn, and on the sinister by a savage, or wild man, proper; and, for the crest, A branch of laurel and a thistle, issuing from two hands conjoined, the one being armed, and the other naked; with this motto, Manet hæc, et altera vincit. In the patents granted in the year 1629, and subsequently thereunto, the above clause was omitted, but another privilege granted; viz: that the Baronets, and their heirs male, shall wear, and carry about their necks, an orange tannie silk ribbon, whereon shall be pendent, in a scutcheon, argent, a saltire, azure; thereon an inescutcheon of the arms of Scotland, with an imperial crown above the scutcheon; and encircled with this motto, Fax mentis honesta gloria. This badge of distinction was lost, during the usurpation of the Long Parliament, and of Oliver Cromwell, but was restored in the year 1775.

The order of Baronets in Ireland was instituted by King James the First, in the 17th year of his reign, soon after his creation of the like dignity in England. The Irish Baronets were to enjoy the same privileges as those of England; they were also to assist in the reduction of Ulster; they had the same arms assigned to them; and were to pay into the treasury of Ireland the same fees, &c as paid in England. They have no established precedence in this part of the kingdom, but are on the same footing, in this respect, as the Irish Peers are with the British.

By the Broughtons, they are descended from Richard de Vernon, fourth son of Hugo de Vernon, Baron of Shipbrooke, at the Conquest; and by a pedigree, in the possession of the Countess of Shipbrooke, it appears that his name ought to be Vernon, and Baron of Shipbrooke, if such a title, granted by the Earls of Chester, could now be taken. This family came into England with William the Conqueror, who divided Northumberland into feudal baronies; one of which, the BARONY of HERON, whereof HADESTON was the head, he granted in 1100 to the ancestor of Sir Robert. In 1296 it descended to Emeline the heir general of William Lord Heron, her grandfather. Sept. 2, 1778.

Sir JAMES-MILLES RIDDELL, Bart. succeeded his grandfather, Sir James.

This family derives its origin from the Counts or Earls of Angoulesme, in France. Wolgrinus, styled a kinsman to Charles the Bald, King of France, and Emperor of Germany, in 886 was created by that Prince, Earl of Angoulesme and Perigord. One of his descendants, Galfridus Ridel II, assisted the Normans in the reduction of Apulia, and William the Conqueror in his expedition against England, where he was rewarded with large grants of land. It would far exceed the limits of this work, to particularise the several succeeding distinguished personages of this family, which preserved in a great measure its grandeur and importance, until the reign of Henry VI. when they entirely lost their possessions in France, and much of their English property. In the 16th century, John Riddell, Esq. of Sallowes, then head of the family, removed into Scotland, where they have ever since been seated. James Riddell, Esq. of Kinglass, in Linlithgowshire, was a popular character in the time of the Commonwealth, and the reign of Charles II. He was member in the last parliament for Horsham.

The Macphersons deduce their descent from a warlike people in Germany, called the Chatti, who long resisted the Roman power; but being at last forced from their habitations by the Emperor Tiberius Cæsar, they embarked for Britain, and by stress of weather were driven to the north of Scotland, where they landed at a place called, after themselves, Chatti's-ness or -point, which afterwards gave the name of Caithness to all that part of the country. The earliest person from whom a regular descent can be traced is John Macpherson, a clergyman, who flourished about 1500, in the vicinity of Dun-Isle. His grandson John left an only surviving son, Martin, who was bred in the reformed religion, and to the church, as were also his son Dugald, his grandson Martin, and his great-grandson John, who married Miss Macleod, by whom he had issue, Martin, John, and Isabel: he died (1765) in the 60th year of his age. Colonel of the Northamptonshire militia, created a Baronet

and heiress of Major-general Richard Worge, by whom he has had issue; Mary-Anne, born May 11, 1790; Arthur-Brooke, Oct. 22, 1791; Sophia, Nov. 20, 1792; Frances, Sept. 30, 1794; died May 1795; Caroline, Dec. 4, 1795; Richard-Worge, April 9, 1797, died 1800; Louisa, Aug. 1, 1799; William, June 12, 1801; and Augusta, Aug. 2, 1802.

This family owes its origin to the house of Latham, or Leighton, in Cheshire; whence, in the reign of King Stephen, three considerable families issued; viz. the Brookes, of Cheshire; the Brookes, who were created Lord Cobham; and the Brookes, now of Oakley. This branch of the family spelt their name Broke, and continued to do so till the beginning of the 17th century. The nineteenth in descent from William Broke, living in 1159, was Arthur Brooke, who married Dorothy, only child and heiress of William Wheelowes, of Gayton, in the county of Northampton. He had three sons, Wheelowes, (or Wheeler) Arthur, and Thomas. Wheelowes succeeded his father in the estate of Oakley, and died unmarried 1762; Thomas, the third son, also died unmarried; Arthur, the second son, who died in 1754, before his elder brother, married Mary, daughter of Zaccheus Isham, D. D. rector of Solihull, Warwickshire, and prebendary of St. Paul's, London; by whom he had two daughters, Mary and Dorothy, who jointly succeeded to the estate of Oakley, agreeably to the will of their uncle Wheelowes, for their lives, with remainder to the first son of the eldest. The aforesaid Mary and Dorothy were both married previously to the decease of their uncle; the former to Richard Supple, Esq. of Ahadoc, county of Cork, Ireland; the latter to Thomas Cecil Mauprell, of Thorpe-Malsor, Northamptonshire, Esq.; she died without issue 1780. Mary, the elder, died 1782, leaving only one son, Richard Brooke, the present Baronet, who, on the decease of his father, Richard Supple, Esq. in 1797, agreeably to the will of his great-uncle, Wheelowes, obtained the King's license to assume the name and arms of Brooke, on succeeding to the estate of Great-Oakley; and at the same time to redouble the name of De Capell, instead of that of Supple, the former being the original paternal name of his family.

The De Capells are supposed to derive their origin from a family of that name, antiently settled in Kent. Philip De Capell went over to Ireland in the reign of Henry II.; and, by a corruption, peculiar to that country, the name is there thought to have been changed to Supple. Richard Supple, Esq. of Ahadoe, married 1714, his relation Mary, daughter and coheirress of Richard Fitzgerald, Esq. a merchant in London; he died 1718, leaving issue, one son and two daughters. His son Richard succeeded him, and married Mary, daughter of Arthur Brooke, Esq. whose only issue was the present Baronet. Of the daughters of the aforesaid Richard Supple and Mary Fitzgerald, Mabellâ died single; and Anne married William Bull, Esq. of Dublin; by whom she had issue, the Rev. Richard Bull, and four daughters; Anne, Mary, Sophia, and Catherine.

CUMING-GORDON, of ALTYR, in Elgin; and Gordonstone, Perthshire.

May 12, 1804.

Sir WILLIAM GORDON CUMING-GORDON, Bart. born July 20, 1787, succeeded his father, Sir Alexander Penrose, Feb. 10, 1806.

The Cumings are supposed, by some, to be descended from the ancient family of the Comtes de France; and that Comes Robertus de Comine, who came to England with William the Conqueror, was progenitor of all the Cumins in this country. It appears from other authorities, that the family of Robert Cumine, Earl of Northumberland, was settled in Britain before the Conqueror came over. Others are of opinion, that they are of the antient inhabitants of Scotland; for the second abbot of Icolmkill, in 597, was Cumine. It is agreed, however, that the Cumines had large possessions in lands, and much greater power than any other name in Scotland whatever, from the reign of Malcolm III. to that of King Robert Bruce. From the Cumines, Lords of Badenoch, chiefs of the whole clan, were descended the Cumines, Earls of Buchan, Earls of Monteith, &c.; but the direct male line of these families has long since failed. Alexander Cuming, of Altny, Esq. (sixteenth in descent from Sir John Cumine, Lord of Badenoch, who died 1249) married Grace, daughter of — Penrose, and niece and sole heiress of John Penrose, of Penrose, in Cornwall, Esq.; by whom he had issue, Alexander-Penrose, John-Penrose, Edward, George, William; James died young; Jane, wife of the Rev. Jonathan Rashleigh, of Silverton, Devon; Mary, wife of William Weale, of Cornwall, Esq.; and Emilia, wife of John Quick, of Newton-House, Devonshire, Esq.

I. Sir ALEXANDER-PENROSE, (eldest son of the aforesaid Alexander) of Altny, and of Gordonstoun, in Elgin, was lieutenant-colonel of the Strathspey, or 1st regiment of fencible men; heir of entail, and representative of the late Sir William Gordon, of Gordonstoun, Bart. He took the name and arms of Gordon, agreeably to the will of Sir William Gordon, aforesaid, and was created a Baronet as above. Dec. 1, 1804.

This family, and several others in England and Ireland, which now bear the names of De Burgh, Burgh, Bourke, Burke, Borough, Burrough, and Burroughs, derive their origin from Robert de Burgho, who came from Normandy with William the Conqueror, and in 1068 was created Earl of Cornwall, while his brother Odo de Burgho, Bishop of Baieux, bore the title of Earl of Kent. One branch of Robert de Burgho's family went to Ireland in the reign of Henry the 2d, and there gave rise to the noble families of Clanricarde, Mayo, and several other families of distinction in that country. Another branch, from which the present Baronet is descended, settled in Lincolnshire, and was ennobled in the reign of Elizabeth, who, on sending Sir Thomas Burroughs, then a knight of the garter, to Ireland, as Lord Deputy, created him a peer. Thomas Lord Burroughs, who in some of the peerages is styled Lord Burrough, and in others, Borgh, and Borough, died in the government without issue male, whereby the title became extinct, and his estates in Lincolnshire passed into the Newcastle and Gainsborough families. He was accompanied to Ireland by a collateral relation of the same name, who acquired a large landed property in the county of Wicklow, and was the immediate ancestor of the present Baronet. His grandson, Thomas Burroughs, married Elizabeth Lewis, niece of James Duke of Ormond, and by her had issue, Francis Burroughs, who married Miss Mushett, niece to the then bishop of Derry, and by her had issue, Thomas, Lewis, and Mary. He married Mary Cane, the daughter of Richard Cane, of Larabrian, in the county of Kildare, Esq. by Anne Lyons, of River Lyons, in the King's County, who was nearly related to the Drogheda, Mountcashel, Mornington, Charleville, Boyne, and Harberton families; and by Mary Cane, Arch-deacon Lewis Burroughs left issue four sons, Medlicott; Newburgh; William, the present Baronet; Thomas, who died unmarried; and three daughters, Mary-Anne; Frances; and Selina-Frances. Medlicott, the eldest son, who was in the army, married Mary Moorecroft, the widow of Captain Morrison, and by her, who is since dead, has issue, William and Mary. William, the third son, when at the bar in Ireland, married Letitia Newburgh, daughter of William Newburgh, of Ballyhaise and Drumcarn, in the county of Cavan, Esq. by Letitia Perrott, the daughter and heiress of Broghill Perrott, of Ballyhugh, in the same county, Esq. and after having been involved in a great lawsuit for a large estate, claimed by his wife, and by her sister, the lady of Sir William Richardson, of Castle Hill, in the county of Tyrone, Baronet, as coheiresses of their brother William Perrott Newburgh, he went to India, where he was appointed advocate-general of Bengal, by Marquis Cornwallis; and for his public services in that country was, in the year 1804, created a Baronet, his patent describing him by his late office. On the same occasion he also received a grant, making an addition to the family arms; and after having represented the borough of Ennisc-killen in parliament, was appointed one of the Judges of his Majesty's supreme Court of Judicature at Fort-William, in Bengal. By his lady, Letitia Newburgh, who died in 1803, he had issue one son, William, who is an officer in the Coldstream regiment of guards; and two daughters, Letitia and Louisa, none of whom are married. Sir Joseph was appointed high sheriff for the county of Stafford, 1779, and elected one of the representatives in parliament for the city of Worcester, in 1802.

The antient family of Scott has been seated at Great-Barr, in the county of Stafford, ever since the reign of Ed. I. In the year 1296, the ancestor of the present Bart. who was in the suit of John Baliol, King of Scotland, when that monarch was detained a prisoner in London, and forbidden, with the rest of his countrymen, from passing to the north of the River Trent, under pain of losing their heads, fixed himself as near that stream as the thick forest of Cannock, now indeed stripped of its woods, would then allow. From that time to the present, the family has lived in a substantial and honourable independence, matched with divers families of good note, occasionally dividing itself into various heads and collateral branches, as appears from a manuscript of Sir Simon Degge, who wrote observations on Staffordshire families, in the year 1669, of which, the following is an extract. "At Barr, are the seats of several families of the Scotts, whereof *Thomas * le Scott*, the principal is owner of a pretty gentleman's estate, but may justly be accounted the prince of the yeomanry, he continuing the old manner of housekeeping, in hospitality to strangers and relieving the poor; and as he is not sparing to himself in taking the recreation with his hounds, when his other affairs will give leave, so is he not ashamed to put his hand to the plough to encourage his servants; and in truth, in these parts, I know none equals his yeoman-like manner of living; but many that take upon them to be gentleman-like, come far behind him, both in estate and manner of living."

The lands possessed by these several families, of which in the year 1690 there were not less than nine, all freeholders, are for the most part now centred (the name of Scott entirely) in the present Baronet.

* To this Thomas le Scott the family arms were granted in the year 1663, as follows:—Argent, on a fess, gules, cottized, azure, three lambs, between three catharine wheels, sable.
